

Kentucky Public Education

Oral Histories

Rochele Rosa
Public relations major

Dr. Melony Shemberger
Assistant professor of journalism and mass communications

What was public education like before the stronghold of standardized testing surfaced?

After conducting research in the archives at Murray State University's Pogue Library, three oral history interviews were conducted in fall 2017 using quality audio recording equipment as part of an intensive focus on public education reporting. The issues and challenges facing public education in Kentucky were investigated and reported. The individuals who were interviewed shared their memories and stories.

This long-term project enabled journalism students to receive experience in oral history as a news-gathering technique. Oral histories, news stories and photographs are stored online as exhibit items. This community engagement project is funded by a Faculty Innovation Grant from the Giving Back Endowment at Murray State.

To access an oral history audio file, scan the QR code.

kyeducationstories.omeka.net
Facebook: facebook.com/edoralhistory

Patsy Carruthers

Dr. Robert "Doc" McGaughey

Richard Jasper

